

The Box TR. NO. 009

Escalante Ranger District, Dixie National Forest

General Description: A moderate hike that follows Pine Creek, a tributary of the Escalante River, through a lush steep-walled canyon. The trail descends through mixed conifer and into Ponderosa pines. Many stream crossings are required.

Mileage: 8 miles one way

Difficulty: Hike: moderate
Bike: not permitted
Horse: moderate
OHV: not permitted

Trailhead access: Graded gravel road

Elevation loss / gain: 1320 feet

Water availability: There is water in Pine Creek along the entire hike. Bring your own water for day hikes. All water should be filtered or treated before drinking.

Hazards / obstacles: Creek crossings can be slippery; a hiking stick may be helpful for balance. Due to the amount of time spent walking in the water, this hike is best done during warm weather months to avoid hypothermia. Flash floods are extremely dangerous in narrow canyons, hikers must be very cautious during flash flood season. Mosquitoes and deer flies can be prevalent in spring and early summer, wear a long sleeve shirt and pants and use insect repellent. Weather can change quickly. Be prepared for cold weather year-round.
